RE-UTILIZATION; John Bolster, excess property branch supervisor, displays a battery charger and some computer equipment that will be up for grabs starting Feb. 6.

SAVE MONEY

REUTILIZATION CUTTING COSTS

A new program that will transfer excess material within NPS and its tenant commands is set to begin Feb. 6.

The program is known as "Cutting Costs Through Reutilization" and is run by the Supply Department's excess property branch.

"This is the first time there has been a real effort to open up a reutilization program at NPS," said John Bolster, excess property branch supervisor. He pointed out that during a 10-month period last year, he internally transferred over $100,000 of excess material.

If you have excess material, excluding hazardous materials, you need to fill out an excess property notification memo and send it to code 4217. Bolster will pick up the property and take it to building 229. He then separates the material, keeps the items that can be used by someone else and sends the rest to Fort Ord.

The property left at the warehouse then becomes fair game for whoever needs it. The warehouse will be opened each Thursday from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. and people can come in and pick out the items they need in their office or space.

If you find something you need, you fill out a memo from your department head to code 4217. At that point you must transfer the material to your office and assume custody.

Bolster also said that the memo will take care of the paperwork side of the transfer from one department to the next. "Keep in mind, minor property needs to be accounted for, and the memo takes care of the transfer."

If you have any questions, call Bolster at ext. 2681.

SRBs REMAIN 13 NECs TO INCREASE

In a semiannual update of the Selective Reenlistment Bonus (SRB) Program, the Navy is making some adjustments to reflect higher retention in many areas, as well as changing demands for certain skills.

The SRB program offers reenlistment bonuses in ratings and naval enlisted classifications (NECs) which are undermanned. SRBs also may be offered when the navy needs to increase future manning in certain areas to meet the changing requirements of the fleet. For example, as older ships are decommissioned, the Navy needs to encourage some sailors to retrain for different ratings or NECs required in newer, more technologically advanced ships.

"SRBs are one of the best ways to encourage retention, training and transition into those areas with current or projected shortages of qualified sailors," said Vice Adm. R. J. Zlatoper, chief of naval personnel. "This is especially important now, as we try to balance the skills and talents of our sailors with the changing needs of the Navy."

The SRB plan is issued by the Bureau of Naval Personnel after a comprehensive review of every rating and NEC by enlisted community managers who analyze manning levels, retention rates and future requirements for sea and shore assignments. Zlatoper said that BUPERS tries to minimize changes from one SRB plan to the next, while meeting fleet and force requirements.

The updated SRB plan announced in NAVADMIN 007-92 goes into effect for eligible sailors on Feb. 5. It offers bonuses in 483 categories or rate, rating and NEC. Half of the award levels are unchanged from the last SRB plan. Thirteen award levels increase in the new plan, while others decrease due to high retention rates and changing requirements.

SRBs are calculated by multiplying the number of years of additional service by monthly base pay, then by the "multiple

SAFETY

FLAT TIRES EXPLOSIVE SITUATION

A Blazer owner pulled into a gas station to have his tire fixed. It had a nail in it. A mechanic pulled out the nail and using a rasp-like tool, began to prepare the hole for a plug. Suddenly, the tire exploded with tremendous force. The mechanic was seriously injured. His wrist, shoulder and both arms were broken and his lung collapsed. He had to have an arterial transplant from his leg to one of his arms plus cosmetic reconstructive surgery.

The explosion was so fierce it knocked plaques off the wall of a waiting room, broke a windshield of a car at the pump and caused $500 damage to a passing vehicle.

How did this happen? When the owner got the flat, he fixed it with a gas tire inflator that comes in a can. The product is compressed flammable gas. Investigators think the mechanic's rasp hit the tires steel belt and caused a spark that ignited the gas.

These fix-a-flat products can be very dangerous. If you use them, ensure that you read the directions, warnings and labels first. If you take your tire to a mechanic to be repaired, make sure you inform him of any temporary fixes you have made.
